Spike in Grocery Costs Likely

Ripple effect of Midwest floods could hit consumers hard

NEW YORK | Raging Midwest floodwaters that swallowed crops and sent corn and soybean prices soaring are about to give consumers more grief at the grocery store.

In the latest bout of food inflation, beef, pork, poultry and even eggs, cheese and milk are expected to get more expensive as livestock owners go out of business or are forced to slaughter more cattle, hogs, turkeys and chickens to cope with rocketing costs for corn-based animal feed.

The floods engulfed an estimated 2 million or more acres of corn and soybean fields in Iowa, Indiana, Illinois and other key growing states, sending world grain prices skyward on fears of a substantially smaller corn crop. Experts say the trickle-down effect could be dramatic later this year, affecting everything from Thanksgiving turkeys to Christmas hams.

Rod Brenneman, president and chief executive of Seaboard Foods, a pork supplier in Sawnee Mission, Kan. that produces 4 million hogs a year, said high corn costs were already forcing producers in his industry to cut back on the number of animals they raise.

It's a similar story for U.S. beef producers, who now spend a whopping 60 to 70 percent of their production costs on animal feed and are seeing that number rise daily as corn prices hover near an unprecedented $8 a bushel, up from about $4 a year ago. (AP)

CUSHIONS

Thief Really Needed Some Small Change, Stale M&M's, Cat Hair

Police say a New York man cut a hole in a woman's couch and hid in the carved-out space until she came home. The woman sat on the couch Wednesday evening and felt a bump in the cushions move. She jumped up, and David Joe Limones, 27, emerged from his hiding place, knocking a cell phone out of her hand. The woman was on the phone with a friend when she entered her apartment because she had filed an earlier complaint against Limones and was worried he might be there. Police said she had asked the friend to stay on the line and call police if something went wrong. When officers arrived, they found Limones and the 22-year-old woman arguing on the apartment's balcony. (AP)

Police Fight Youth Steak-Hairing Spree

A former cook has pleaded guilty to a food-tampering charge alleging he inserted body hairs in a steak. Ryan Kropp, 24, of West Bend, Wis., was fired. The criminal complaint said that when a manager asked a customer how his steak was, the customer said it was somewhat overdone, although he had almost finished eating it. The manager insisted Kropp prepare a new steak the way the customer wanted it, so he could take it home. The customer called the restaurant and police after finding the hair the next day. (AP) size has decreased from 50 to 36. The 42-year-old businessman from Quantico, Va., says he chose McDonald's because it's convenient. His goal is to get back to the 185 pounds he weighed when he married Tricia Summer. (AP)

Still Depressed?

If you (or someone you know) have been diagnosed with major depression, you may be able to participate in this research study designed to decrease symptoms and better understand causes of depression. This study tests whether a new medication that targets a novel system called glutamate, compared with placebo, will be effective in improving depression. This is a 10-week inpatient study, in Bethesda, MD. After completion of the study the participant is given short-term treatment and transitioned back to the community. In addition, all research participation is without cost.

Patients should:

- Be ages 18-55
- Have been diagnosed with major depression
- Have taken an antidepressant that did not help

Sen. Barack Obama says energy traders are partly to blame for gas prices.

Obama: I'll Bear Down On Traders

WASHINGTON | Sen. Barack Obama on Sunday said as president he would strengthen oversight of energy traders he blames in large part for the skyrocketing price of oil.

The candidate's campaign singled out the so-called "Enron loophole" for allowing speculators to run up the cost of fuel by operating outside federal regulation.

Obama's campaign blamed the loophole on former Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who serves as Republican candidate Sen. John McCain's co-chairman and economic adviser. The Obama campaign accused Gramm of inserting a provision into a bill "at the behest of Enron lobbyists" that exempted some energy traders from government oversight.

McCain spokesman Tucker Bonds said McCain has supported efforts to close the loophole and noted the bill was signed into law by President Clinton. (AP)

'Press' Will Be Hosted by Brokaw

NBC says newscaster will lead Sunday show through the election

NEW YORK | Veteran news anchor Tom Brokaw has agreed to moderate NBC's "Meet the Press" through the November election to fill the vacancy created by the death of Tim Russert, the network said Sunday.

"I'm just thrilled that Tom has agreed to do this," NBC News President Steve Capus said.

The decision gives NBC a well-known, authoritative presence at the helm of the broadcast in an election year. Brokaw said he volunteered for the job in part as a tribute to Russert.

"Tim was the first to say that 'Meet the Press' was a national treasure and he was a temporary custodian," Brokaw said. "We both understood the importance of it to the country and to NBC News, and he took it to an entirely new level."

He intends to follow Russert's template of aggressive questioning based on research of a guest's public record. The show will continue to be Washington-based, with Betsy

Brokaw

Fischer as executive producer. "Many people have described this election as the election of a lifetime, and we're in the thick of it," Capus said. "It just logically makes sense to have someone that the nation knows and the nation trusts with a steady hand."

record. The show will continue to be Washington-based, with Betsy

said. "It just logically makes sense to have someone that the nation knows and the nation trusts with a steady hand."

It also gives NBC News time to study its options before choosing a successor. Brokaw joked during Russert's memorial service that the Kennedy Center was filled with people interested in the job. David Gregory, Andrea Mitchell and Chris Matthews are considered the top in-house candidates. Brokaw has made it clear the move to "Meet the Press" is temporary.

"The plan is for me to be in place until they can find somebody who can take it over on a permanent basis," he said. DAVID BAUDER (AP)

Charitable Giving Steady Despite Financial Turmoil

NEW YORK | Americans gave to charities last year at about the same rate they did the previous year, holding steady on their donations in the face of a housing-market meltdown and a crisis in credit, a study released Monday showed.

But soaring gasoline and food prices have been added to the economic worries this year, which may lead to a drop in giving, nonprofit groups and fundraisers say.

Donations by Americans to charities remained at 2.2 percent of gross domestic product in 2007, matching levels from 2006, according to the yearly study from the philanthropy-tracking Giving USA Foundation. (AP)

Barr's Bid May Undermine McCain

Third-party candidate could exploit some conservatives' unease

ATLANTA | A fiery former GOP congressman who gained national prominence for doggedly pursuing the impeachment of President Clinton has some Republicans worried he'll play spoiler in a tight presidential contest.

Bob Barr's Libertarian Party bid for the White House is the longest of long shots, but political experts say he may be able to exploit the unease some conservatives feel about Sen. John McCain. Combined with the surge in turnout among Democrats during the primaries and a difficult political climate, they see a recipe for trouble for the GOP.

"Bob could be the Ralph Nader of 2008," said Dan Schnur, a GOP consultant in California. Nader is the third-party candidate many Democrats blame for helping George W. Bush narrowly win in 2000.

Democrats seem gleeful at the Bob Barr is running for president on the Libertarian Party ticket. Barr has only an outside chance at winning the election, but he could take votes from John McCain.

prospect. Tad Devine, a Washington-based Democratic strategist, said Republicans "are crazy if they aren't worried about Barr."

"Undoubtedly, any votes he gets come out of McCain's votes," Devine said. "He hurts them."

Barr scoffs at talk that he will play spoiler, saying he is in the race to win it. "If Senator McCain is not successful, it will be because his message and his vision did not resonate with a plurality of the voters," he said.

Some Republicans aren't worried about Barr's candidacy. Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich said voting for Barr is the same as voting for Democrat Barack Obama and said he's confident most GOP voters will understand that.

"No reasonable conservative is going to vote for anyone except McCain," Gingrich said.

Even so, Barr campaign manager Russell Verney said he expects Republicans to mount challenges to keep Barr off the ballot in a number of states. SHANNON MCCAFFREY (AP)

Wildfires Strike Calif. Forests, Wine Country

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. | Wildfires were scattered around Northern California on Sunday in the heart of wine country and in remote forests, the latest in what has become an unusually destructive year. State officials said lightning started more than 500 fires during the weekend.

One had spread across 5.5 square miles by early Sunday, after starting Saturday afternoon in Napa County and quickly moving into a mostly rural area of Solano County.

Wildfires have destroyed at least 125 homes in Northern California so far this year. Blazes started popping up in the region just as California's unofficial fire season began in mid-May. (AP)

Researcher Jay Quade scours a test pit in Chile's Atacama Desert, where bizarre microbes thrive in inhospitable conditions.

A Search for ET on Earth

Microbes that thrive in harsh climates may also inhabit Mars

LOS ANGELES | Bizarre microbes flourish in the most punishing environments on Earth, from the bone-dry Atacama Desert in Chile to the boiling hot springs of Yellowstone National Park to the sunless sea bottom vents in the Pacific.

Could such exotic life emerge in the frigid arctic plains of Mars?

NASA's Phoenix spacecraft could soon find out. Since plopping down near the Martian north pole a month ago, the lander has been busy poking the soil and collecting scoopfuls to bake in a test oven.

There hasn't been a eureka moment yet. But Phoenix turned up a promising lead last week when it uncovered what scientists believe are ice flecks in one trench and an icy layer in another.

Scientists think the Phoenix spacecraft has discovered ice on Mars, above.

Scientists hope experiments by the lander will reveal whether the ice has ever melted and whether there are any organic compounds.

"We're looking for the basic ingredients that would allow life to prosper in this environment," said chief scientist Peter Smith of the University of Arizona.

The discovery of extreme life forms, known as extremophiles, on Earth has helped inform scientists in their search.

"It's very suggestive that there are lots of worlds that may support life that at first glance may look like fourth-rate real estate," said Seth Shostak, an astronomer at the SETI Institute.

While the possibility for ET seems to grow with new extremophile discoveries, the truth is there's no evidence that life ever evolved on Mars or if it even exists today.

But if there were past or present life on the red planet, scientists speculate it would likely be similar to some extreme life on Earth — microscopic and hardy, capable of withstanding brutal conditions.

"It's going to be microbes [on Mars]. It's not going to be a little green man," said Kenneth Stedman, a biologist with the Center for Life in Extreme Environments at Portland State University. ALICIA CHANG (AP)

Gas Increases 10 Cents in 2 Weeks

CAMARILLO, CALIF. | A national survey shows consumers across the nation are paying an average of 10 cents per gallon more for gasoline than they were two weeks ago.

The average price of regular gasoline at self-serve stations was $4.10 per gallon on Friday. Mid-grade was $4.22 per gallon and premium went for $4.33. That's according to the Lundberg Survey of 7,000 gas stations nationwide, which was released on Sunday.

The survey showed the average U.S. price for gas is $1.10 higher than it was a year ago.

The California cities of Los Angeles and Fresno tied for the nation's highest gas, at $4.59 per gallon for regular. (AP) Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi attends a meeting about oil on Sunday.

Saudis: Oil Increase Is Possible

Top crude exporter pledges to produce more if it's necessary

JIDDAH, SAUDI ARABIA | Facing strong U.S. pressure and global dismay over oil prices, Saudi Arabia said Sunday it will produce more crude this year if the market needs it. But the vague pledge fell far short of U.S. hopes for a specific increase and may do little to lower prices immediately.

For now, the current "oil shock" leaves Western countries with little choice but to move toward nuclear power and change their energy-consumption habits, Britain's prime minister warned at a rare meeting of oil-producing and consuming nations.

Saudi Arabia — the world's top crude exporter — called the gathering Sunday to send a message that it, too, is concerned by high oil prices.

Instead, the meeting highlighted the sharp disagreement between producers like Saudi Arabia and consuming countries like Britain and the United States over the core factors driving steep price hikes. Oil closed near $135 per barrel on Friday — almost double the price a year ago.

Saudi Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi said the kingdom is willing to produce more than the 9.7 million barrels of oil per day it had already planned to produce in July — if the market requires it.

Zimbabwe Opposition Quits Runoff

Mugabe rival says presidential election has lost its credibility

HARARE, ZIMBABWE | Opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai pulled out of Zimbabwe's violence-wracked presidential runoff Sunday, declaring that the election was no longer credible and the loss of life among his supporters was too high.

The announcement cleared the way for President Robert Mugabe to continue his 28-year rule, despite mounting condemnation from even loyal African allies that the former independence hero has become a despot who has bankrupted the country's once-thriving economy.

"We can't ask the people to cast their vote on June 27 when that vote will cost their lives. We will no longer participate in this violent sham of an election," Tsvangirai said.

Zimbabwean Information Minister Sikhanyiso Ndlovu said Friday's runoff would go ahead in accordance with the constitution — and to prove Zimbabweans' support for Mugabe, who has held power since 1980.

"The constitution does not say that if somebody drops out or decides to chicken out the runoff will not be held," Ndlovu said. ANGUS SHAW (AP)

Female Suicide Bomber Kills 15 In Iraqi Province

BAGHDAD | A female suicide bomber concealing explosives beneath her black robe struck outside a government complex northeast of Baghdad on Sunday, killing at least 15 people and wounding more than 40, U.S. and Iraqi officials said.

It was the 21st suicide mission carried out by a woman in Iraq this year, the U.S. military said.

The explosion occurred at about 1 p.m. Sunday as dozens of people were leaving a walled compound that includes a courthouse and the provincial governor's office in Baqouba, the capital of Diyala province and a former al-Qaeda in Iraq stronghold 35 miles northeast of Baghdad.

A U.S. military statement said the dead included seven Iraqi police and eight civilians. (AP)

Group Blames Police for Mexico Deaths

MEXICO CITY | Mexico City's Human Rights Commission cited evidence on Sunday that police may have partly blocked the exit at a nightclub where a stampede killed 12 people, including a 13-year-old girl.

Police officers responding to reports of drug and alcohol violations raided the News Devine club Friday evening. Panicked revelers piled up in a deadly crush at the narrow exit in a desperate attempt to escape.

"There are photographs and witness testimony that police were posted at the exit, and that this created a blockage — a sandwich effect is what one of the witnesses called it," said Emilio Alvarez Icaza, head of the rights commission. "The police formed up along the length of the staircase, which was both the exit and entrance and which was already pretty narrow." (AP)

740 Missing in Philippines Storm

Coast guard searches for survivors after typhoon capsizes ferry

MANILA, PHILIPPINES | Rescuers battled huge waves and strong winds Sunday to reach a ferry that capsized during a deadly typhoon in the Philippines a day earlier, but found no immediate signs of the more than 740 passengers and crew.

Coast guard frogmen who managed to get to the stricken ship got no response when they rapped on the hull with metal instruments. They then had to give up for the night due to the strong waves.

"They haven't seen anyone. They're scouring the area. They're studying the direction of the waves to determine where survivors may have drifted," coast guard spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Arman Balilo said.

Rescuers hoped to get inside on Monday, likely with U.S. assistance requested by the Philippine Red Cross.

Typhoon Fengshen has killed at least 137 people across the sprawling archipelago, setting off land-slides and floods, and knocking out electricity. Major streets were flooded.

So far, 10 people from the ferry are known to have made it to land. Six bodies, including those of a man and woman who had bound themselves together, have washed ashore, along with children's slippers and life jackets.

Reynato Lanoria, a janitor on the ship, estimated that 100 people could have survived, "but the others were trapped inside."

Officials were checking reports that a large number of survivors might have reached one nearby island and that a raft was spotted off another, coast guard spokesman Cmdr. Antonio Cuasito said.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo scolded coast guard officials in a teleconference aired live on nationwide radio Sunday for allowing the ferry to leave Manila for Cebu on Friday, despite the bad weather. PAUL ALEXANDER (AP)

A truck delivers a shipment of fruit from Israel to Gaza near a Sufa, Gaza Strip, crossing on Sunday as Israel increased the flow of basic goods to the area.

Israel Sends More Goods Into Gaza

Increase in shipments to Palestinians is part of truce with Hamas

GAZA CITY, GAZA STRIP | Israel allowed dozens of trucks to deliver food, diapers and clothes to the Gaza Strip on Sunday, boosting the flow of basic goods as part of a four-day-old truce with Hamas.

Further increases are expected if the quiet continues, offering the prospect of relief for Gazans after a year of Israeli sanctions against the Hamas regime.

The six-month deal is meant to end attacks that have killed more than 400 Palestinians and seven Israelis since the Islamic Hamas seized control of the Gaza Strip a year ago, and pave the way toward wider-reaching agreements.

The truce has been holding since it began Thursday — evidence that both sides have an interest in the unsigned accord.

Hamas wants credit for ending the blockade and the legitimacy of reaching even an indirect agreement with Israel. Israel needs the halt in daily rocket attacks that disrupted the lives of thousands in the border area. Critics say it gives Hamas a chance to rearm.

On Sunday, 90 truckloads of supplies were transferred from Israeli to Palestinian vehicles at a Gaza crossing, up from between 60 and 70 before the truce went into effect, said military spokesman Gil Karie.

Ihab Ghussen, a spokesman for the Hamas-controlled Interior Ministry in Gaza, said the increase was in keeping with the terms of the truce brokered by Egypt.

Other goods barred from Gaza during a yearlong economic blockade, like cement, are supposed to be allowed in 10 days after the beginning of the truce, Ghussen said.

Among the goods shipped Sunday were milk, fruit, vegetables, diapers, toilet paper and shoes, Palestinian officials said. IBRAHIM BARZAK (AP)

Va. Ready to Execute 100th Inmate

Barring intervention, grim state milestone will be marked Wed.

RICHMOND, VA. | The nation's second-busiest death chamber is preparing for a grim milestone.

Unless the courts or Virginia Gov. Timothy M. Kaine intervene, Robert Stacy Yarbrough, 30, will die by lethal injection Wednesday at the Greensville Correctional Center, becoming the 100th person executed in Virginia since capital punishment was reinstated three decades ago.

Virginia ranks second in modern-era executions to Texas, which has carried out 406. But a decreasing number of death sentences, a dwindling death row and the state's changing political climate could allow others to surpass Virginia.

Oklahoma isn't far behind with 86 executions. Missouri and Florida also have put more than 60 inmates to death.

"I think five years from now, Virginia won't be in that posi-

SHOWING MORE MERCY

Virginia is not sending as many criminals to death row as it did in previous years:

→ From 1990 to 2000, the state averaged six death sentences each year.

→ From 2001 through 2006, Virginia averaged three death sentences each year.

tion," said Richard Dieter, executive director of the Death Penalty Information Center. "It will still have the death penalty and it will still be executing people, but one or two a year perhaps."

Virginia was home to the first recorded execution in the New World, when in 1608 Captain George Kendall was shot at Jamestown for being a spy for Spain.

The state led the nation in executions before the U.S. Supreme Court declared the death penalty unconstitutional in 1972. Capital punishment was reinstated four years later.

CENTREVILLE, MD. | For four centuries, they were the ultimate pack rats.

Now a Maryland family's massive collection of letters, maps and printed bills has surfaced in the attic of a former plantation, providing a firsthand account of life from the 1660s through World War II.

State archivists and researchers at Washington College are reviewing the documents, which came from the former Poplar Grove plantation in Centreville.

The papers come from several generations of the Emory family, who were prominent tobacco and wheat farmers.

3 Motorcyclists Killed in Separate D.C.-Area Accidents

WASHINGTON | Authorities say three motorcyclists died Saturday in separate crashes in Montgomery County and the District of Columbia.

Police say at about 2 p.m. a man traveling southbound on his motorcycle along Georgia Avenue in Montgomery County collided with a car heading in the other direction.

Officials say the car was attempting to make a left turn at Heathfield Road. The motorcyclist died at the scene.

Montgomery County police say another man riding a motorcycle on Strathmore Avenue struck a tree at about 11 p.m.

Police say he was taken to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

In southeast Washington, police say a man on a motorcycle going west on M Street about 6:30 p.m. collided with a car traveling south on Seventh Street that began to make a turn. The motorcyclist was taken to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead. (AP)

Cable ads attacking Verizon FiOS service seem to be misleading

MISCOMMUNICATION | Avery Axel was annoyed with his cable company, Comcast, and was considering switching to Verizon's new FiOS fiber-optic TV and Internet service.

The picture on his TV would freeze now and then, and he had heard good things about FiOS. Then the 21-year-old student saw a TV commercial from Comcast that made fun of FiOS and claimed the cable TV company has a larger fiber-optic network.

"I thought to myself: 'Maybe I don't have to switch, because if Comcast has fiber optics now, that means that they'll be better,'" said Axel, who lives in Roosevelt, N.J.

But after asking around online, he found that nothing's changed about Comcast's service: It still uses

A Comcast newspaper ad is similar to those for other cable networks emphasizing that they are fiber-optic, though they don't draw fiber all the way to the home.

coaxial cable to connect homes. It does use fiber-optic cable further away in the network, as it has for many years.

"From what everyone said ... this is kind of misleading," Axel said.

Axel had fallen for one of a series of commercials run by every major cable company that competes with Verizon's FiOS. Besides Comcast, Cablevision, Time Warner Cable, Cox and Charter have all run ads belittling FiOS.

The ads have a curiously similar message, emphasizing that cable networks "are" fiber-optic, even though none of the companies draw fiber all the way to the home, like Verizon does in most cases when it installs FiOS. This allows for faster Internet speeds and, according to Consumer Reports, better picture quality.

"Cable is deploying the rhetoric instead of the technology," said Verizon spokeswoman Bobbi Henson.

Comcast spokeswoman Jennifer Khoury said the ad was referring to the fact that the company has the largest "residential" fiber network in the nation, stretching for 125,000 miles, and noted that a freezing picture doesn't necessarily have anything to do with the network technology.

"Our ads reinforce the value and scope of our fiber network to our customers," she said, adding that the fact that Verizon uses fiber to the home makes little difference to the services it can provide.

Comcast has started upgrading its network to provide FiOS-like speeds in 20 percent of its markets this year.

Comcast has also started running newspaper ads with the message: "We already have a fiber-optic network serving ALL our homes" reads one in the Seattle-Post Intelligencer.

"Cable is deploying the rhetoric instead of the technology."

BOBBI HENSON, VERIZON SPOKESWOMAN

Fiber-optic lines have been the main conduit for telecommunications since the '80s.

In the late '90s, cable companies upgraded their networks to draw fiber closer to homes, which allowed them to offer broadband, video on demand and other services.

The fiber lines end at neighborhood nodes, where the signal is transferred to a coaxial cable shared among as many as 500 households. PETER SVENSSON (AP)

Emilio nets 8th goal of the year in D.C.'s win against San Jose

UNITED | Defender Gonzalo Martinez scored in the 55th minute and D.C. United held on to beat the San Jose Earthquakes 3-1 Sunday.

The win was the third straight and fourth in five games for United (6-7-1), who began the season

2-7. D.C. improved to 5-2 at home, where it has outscored opponents 19-10.

Four minutes after the Earthquakes tied the game at 1, Martinez took a pass from midfielder Marcelo Gallardo and rocketed a shot off the far post and into the net. The assist was one of two for Gallardo.

Meanwhile, San Jose (3-8-2) remains in last place in the Western Conference.

Goalkeeper dominates shootout for 1st major win vs. rival in 88 years

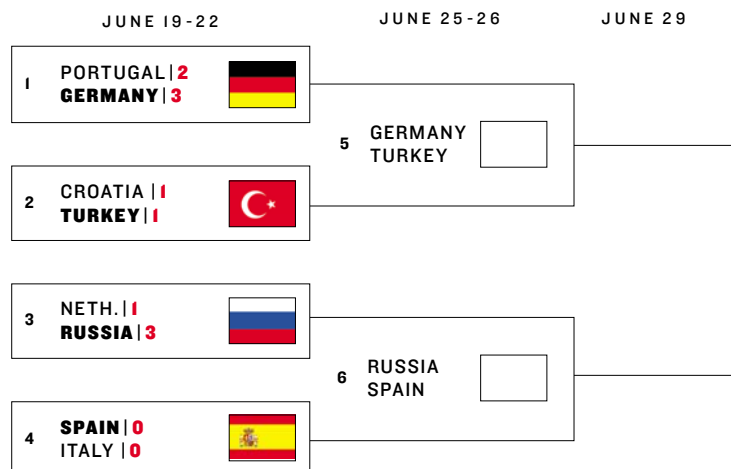

EURO 2008 | When a team has gone so long without a big win, it doesn't care how that victory comes.

For Spain, it came in the form of a penalty-kicks shootout over World Cup champion Italy, 4-2 after a lackluster 0-0 draw through 120 minutes Sunday night in the European Championship quarterfinals.

"We finally had the luck that we have been missing," goalkeeper Iker Casillas said after saving two penalty kicks.

It was much more than luck, though. Spain showed the kind of fortitude it often has lacked in big tournaments. And Casillas was brilliant in the shootout, guessing right on all four kicks, and stopping Daniele De Rossi and Antonio Di Natale.

Cesc Fabregas scored the decisive penalty kick, setting up a semi-final against Russia on Thursday night in Vienna. Spain, the only group winner to make the semifinals, beat the Russians 4-1 in their group opener.

It was the first victory for Spain over Italy in a major competition in 88 years — since the 1920 Olympics. Spanish coach Luis Aragones said Spain's King Juan Carlos went into the locker room after the match and spoke to the players.

Catalanotto singles in game-winner to cap Rangers' late rally

NATIONALS | Frank Catalanotto helped the Texas Rangers to a rare kind of win — one that put them above .500.

Even after Catalanotto sparked Sunday's 5-3 win over the Washington Nationals, the Rangers (39-38) are just 4-15 when trying to reach a winning record this season.

Vicente Padilla (10-3) gave up three runs and five hits over seven innings to win for the eighth time in nine decisions since April 27. He struck out five and walked two but wasn't in line for the win until the

The Nationals' John Lannan avoids a tag by Rangers first baseman Max Ramirez for a hit in the third inning of Sunday's game. Despite Lannan's play, Texas won 5-3.

Rangers rallied in the eighth.

Brandon Boggs reached on a walk off Luis Ayala (1-4), and after Joel Hanrahan came on in relief, Boggs stole second, went to third on a wild pitch, and after a walk to Byrd, Catalanotto dribbled an RBI grounder to left, sending Washington to its 15th loss in 21 games.

Washington starter John Lannan hasn't won in his last six starts. He allowed two runs and four hits, and struck out six over six innings, without walking a batter.

Lannan bruised his right wrist when Saltalamacchia lined a ball back at him in the fifth, but he stayed in the game. Manager Manny Acta said he expected him to make his next start.

The Nationals have scored just four runs to support him in his last six starts.

"I don't feel bad for him," Acta said. "He knows that everybody here is paying attention to how good he's pitching and how he's doing. Would I want him to have six, seven more wins than he has? Yes, I do." (AP)

Long Ball Dooms the Birds

Brewers' Fielder hits 2 of the team's 4 homers in 7-3 win over the O's

ORIOLES | Prince Fielder is feeling good at the plate again, and he has the numbers to prove it. Fielder hit two home runs, Corey Hart and Bill Hall also went deep, and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-3 on Sunday for their sixth win in seven games. Manny Parra (7-2) struggled through five innings but won his fifth consecutive start. He helped himself get out of trouble by inducing three double plays. Parra issued a career-high six of the Orioles' 10 walks, but only one scored. "It's a crazy game," Orioles manager Dave Trembley said.

Prince Fielder hit two of the Brewers' four homers against the O's on Sunday. Garrett Olson (5-3) gave up four runs and four hits in five innings for the Orioles.

Baltimore took a 3-2 lead on Kevin Millar's RBI double in the fifth. Hall led off the bottom half with his 10th homer and first since May 13. Gabe Kapler then walked, advanced to second on Rickie Weeks' two-out walk and scored on J.J. Hardy's single to left. Ryan Bukvich, promoted from Triple-A Norfolk before the game, replaced Olson to open the sixth, and Fielder greeted him with a 435-foot home run just inside the right-field foul pole. Hardy doubled off Chad Bradford to open the seventh, and Fielder connected against left-hander Jamie Walker to make it 7-3. "They got their runs with one swing of the bat, multiple times," Trembley said. "That was the difference in the game." (AP)

THREE TIMES AS NICE: Mark Teixeira homered three times, connecting from both sides of the plate to lead the Atlanta Braves over the Seattle Mariners 8-3 on Sunday. Teixeira became the fifth player, and the first Atlanta player, to hit three homers in a game at Turner Field. (AP)

Federer's Favored Status Doubted

Borg says 5-year reign at Wimbledon could be coming to an end

TENNIS | Bjorn Borg and Novak Djokovic say Roger Federer's reign at Wimbledon is in jeopardy.

"It's maybe a time where some people talk a little bit too much," Federer said Sunday, 24 hours before he was to begin his pursuit of a record-tying sixth consecutive Wimbledon title.

Since the early 1900s, Federer and Borg (1976-80) are the only men to win Wimbledon five times in a row.

Yet there has been debate the past two weeks regarding whether Federer is this year's favorite.

The 26-year-old Federer has struggled in recent months. For only the second time since 2003, he has been beaten at two consecutive major tournaments.

Ranked No. 1 since February 2004, Federer blames his slow start on a bout with mononucleosis and says he feels fine now. He showed no signs of slippage when he moved to grass the week after the loss in Paris, winning a tournament in Germany without losing his serve, much less a set.

"I got the question, 'Can Roger

SHADOW OF A DOUBT: Despite winning Wimbledon five straight times, Roger Federer is being questioned by Bjorn Borg.

win Wimbledon?" said Andy Roddick, who lost to Federer in the 2004 and 2005 finals. "I found that to be one of the most ridiculous questions I've ever answered in my life."

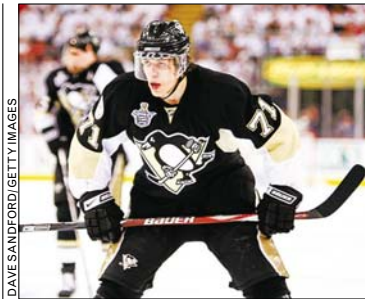

Tell it to Borg, who says Rafael Nadal and Djokovic are more likely to win Wimbledon than Federer.

Djokovic likes the sound of that. He won his first major title at the Australian Open after beating Federer in the semifinals — the first sign of a narrowing gap atop the rankings.

"Other players are around to really challenge me," Federer said. "That only motivates me. So, it should be an interesting Wimbledon this year."

That's one point on which everyone can agree. STEVEN WINE (AP)

The Toronto Star reported the Russian league was set to offer Malkin $12.5M.

NHL Dismisses Russian League's Push for Malkin

HOCKEY | Pittsburgh Penguins Russian star Evgeni Malkin has no intention of playing back home, says his agent, J.P. Barry. And the threat of a newly revamped Russian professional league's poaching talent is being dismissed by NHL officials.

"At this point, it's not a major concern," NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly said. "We understand there's going to be a league. We'll see what impact it has."

Daly's comments came after the Toronto Star reported that teams from the new Continental Hockey League intended to offer Malkin a contract worth at least $12.5 million per season, far more than any NHL club could afford under the salary cap. (AP)

RUN, JAMES, RUN! In "Wanted," McAvoy plays a corporate cog recruited by a league of assassins. Angelina Jolie co-stars.

Actor 'Wanted'

Hot performer du jour James McAvoy will shoot to kill on Friday

RISEING STAR | "Wanted" is the title of James McAvoy's new movie, a high-octane adventure about a secret order of assassins. The label "wanted" could also apply to the young actor himself.

McAvoy's star began to rise two years ago when he played an idealistic physician who becomes the unwitting pawn of African dictator Idi Amin in "The Last King of Scotland." Forest Whitaker won an Oscar for his depiction of Amin.

McAvoy subsequently starred in the British coming-of-age drama "Starter for 10," followed by the period drama "Becoming Jane," opposite Anne Hathaway. Without catching his breath, he played a servant falsely accused of a heinous crime in the acclaimed drama "Atonement." He also had a supporting role in the Reese Witherspoon-produced independent dramady "Penelope." Most recently, McAvoy wrapped production on the Tolstoy-inspired drama "The Last Station," co-starring Christopher Plummer and Helen Mirren.

With his boyish face, protruding nose and smallish stature (he's 5 feet 8 inches tall), the 29-year-old actor is not the typical chiseled leading man type. But neither were Al Pacino or Dustin Hoffman (whom he considers his role model).

Though modest and polite — he offers to prepare tea during this interview — he is keenly focused on his goals. He confesses that one of his biggest faults is speaking his mind. He doesn't hold back if he sees something he doesn't like on the set, but he'll abide by the director's decision ultimately.

"I've been doing this for nine years now, ever since I left drama school," he points out. "The previous seven years allowed me to get a proper professional grounding. I don't feel like a 16-year-old kid who suddenly has landed a role in a big three-movie franchise. I've had seven years of working hard, when nobody cared what I was doing. If I failed badly, I failed quietly. When I finally came out into the public eye, I was better prepared to deal with it, professionally and personally."

In "Wanted," McAvoy plays an office drone named Wesley who is yanked from his ho-hum existence when a mysterious woman (Angelina Jolie) warns him that he is in imminent danger of assassination. After a harrowing sequence of events, Wesley discovers that the woman's name is Fox, she is part of a secret order of assassins, and he is destined to become one of them. The film opens Friday. ANGELA DAWSON (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

Once a Lover, Always a Lover

Chante Moore sticks to her syrupy-sweet signature ballads

MUSIC | Over the course of her 15-year career, Chante Moore has thrived on songs about the essence of love and relationships — especially with her two albums with hubby Kenny Lattimore.

So, it's fitting — even after eight years without a solo project — that Moore would stick with the similar formula that earned her three gold-selling albums during 1990s.

On her new album, "Love the Woman," her lyrical approach is very familiar to past hits "Chante's Got a Man" and "Love's Taken Over." But that's not a bad thing, as Moore flourishes with her soulful, high-pitched vocals on the slow-paced track "It Ain't Supposed to Be This Way." On a rendition of Minnie Riperton's "Give Me Time," she recalls her unsteady emotions before falling for Lattimore.

The wife of R&B artist Kenny Lattimore, Moore has nothing but love to give.

Moore also strives to empower her fellow woman to understand her self-worth on "Special," a smooth acoustic guitar track produced by Raphael Saddiq. On the piano-driven melody "My Eyes," Moore insists that hiding emotions isn't her best trait.

Moore's lyrics aren't that fresh compared to her previous projects. But she still understands what works for her and what her fans expect her to produce.

'Hard Times' sheds light on the flaws in public education

BROKEN | Susan and Alan Raymond have been "capturing reality" for more than 40 years. The husband-and-wife team's 1973 PBS series, "An American Family," captured the daily life of the Louds, and the production shocked audiences with its candor.

The Raymonds have stayed dedicated to cinema verite, and to issues of family and children in general. Their latest work, "Hard Times at Douglass High," explores public education in America. The movie public schools are in a world of hurt right now. But "Hard Times at Douglass High," which chronicles a year in the life at the school, isn't just about Frederick Douglass High School.

"I think if you did the film in Philadelphia, you'd find the same set of circumstances you'd find in that school," Alan Raymond said.

The documentary shines a light on many of the school's problems, but it also shows the school's finer moments, such as the music program and its boys basketball team.

"Douglass had a nice atmosphere in the school," Alan Raymond said. "I think the school is, by and large, a safe environment. I know we have that one fight scene, which I kind of regret putting in the film, but it was a relatively safe environment."

Cigarette Smoker? Want to Quit?

Give Research a Try!

(financial compensation is available)
Stamped copy on file with IRB: 26 January 2007

The Center for Health Behavior Research under the direction of Dr. Elbert Glover, PhD, is conducting a research study testing an already FDA approved medication (not yet approved for smoking cessation) which may also help people stop smoking.

Call Today!
(301) 405-0128

To participate you must:

- Be highly motivated to quit
- Be over 18 years of age
- Smoked daily for the past five years
- Attend 12 office visits over a 6 month period

Participants will receive at no cost:

- Physical exams and laboratory assessments
- Individual counseling
- FDA approved medication or placebo (50:50 chance of receiving the drug)

To Enroll Call
Jessica Rath, PhD
(301) 405-0128 Today!

This study is being funded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, National Institutes of Health

Entertainment

Metallic History

Judas Priest's ode to Nostradamus is marketed to the max

CHOICES | "Everybody," Judas Priest vocalist Rob Halford says, "is eager to grab the full metal opera."

Halford is talking about "Nostradamus" the veteran U.K. metal act's 16th studio album — and its first concept work. The double-disc set, which was released last week, tells the story of 16th-century prophet Michel de Nostredame, better-known as Nostradamus.

Firmly targeting physical sales, the album is available in three configurations, London-based Sony BMG Vice President of International Dave Shack says. "It's an amazing opus that has been a mission of love, so the band wanted to do something special," he says. "The band came up with the [marketing] ideas," he adds, "and it's Judas Priest's way of rewarding their fans. The sets retail at very competitive prices."

Fans can buy the regular version of "Nostradamus" in a jewel case with a 20-page artwork booklet designed in conjunction with artist Mark Wilkinson, who has worked on numerous Judas Priest albums. Or they can choose the "regular deluxe" version, which has the double-CD housed in a 48-page hardbound book.

A third "super deluxe" release includes a triple-album vinyl version of the set and an exclusive poster, plus the hardbound CD/booklet package. That version will be available through normal retail channels internationally but is exclusive to Best Buy stores in the States. Sweetening the pot for fans, select packages will include a code redeemable for a free lawn ticket to see the band on this summer's Live Nation-promoted Metal Masters tour with Heaven & Hell, Motorhead and Testament.

"Judas Priest, in general, might be a little bit of a harder audience to reach, so you've got to go to a lot of different places. But a large target audience is reached through Best Buy," Epic Vice President of Marketing Scott Greer says.

"It's a sign of the times. You have to be really rigorous in all aspects of the way you present something of this size," Halford says. "You really have to relate to the experiences that are out there for the listener, and that's what we're doing."

Spidey To Return In 2011

NO. 4 | Peter Parker is swinging back into the multiplex — but not for a while.

"Spider-Man" producer Laura Ziskin said the fourth installment in the web-slinging superhero series is tentatively scheduled to arrive in May 2011.

In remarks last week to theater owners from California and Nevada, Parker and his alter ego will return.

Ziskin said there was no finished screenplay, but that she and Sony Pictures were hopeful "Spider-Man 4" could be ready in three years.

The first three movies make up one of the most successful franchises in modern Hollywood history, grossing a combined $2.5 billion worldwide. Neither star Tobey Maguire nor director Sam Raimi is committed to work on the next installment. But Sony has paid Marvel to renew its rights.

Before she tackles the next "Spider-Man," Ziskin is producing a one-hour fundraiser for cancer research that will be shown commercial-free on ABC, NBC and CBS on Sept. 5. Ziskin, a cancer survivor, showed the several hundred exhibitors a new theatrical public service announcement directed by David Fincher ("Fight Club") that promotes Ziskin's cancer cause, Stand Up to Cancer (online at standup2cancer.org).

JOHN HORN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

MORE THERAPY NEEDED: HBO has renewed the drama "In Treatment" for a second season and is moving production from Los Angeles to New York. The second season will feature a new roster of patients seeing Dr. Paul Weston (Gabriel Byrne).

Unexpected Punk Rock

'Heavy Load' looks at a group of talented, disabled musicians

DOCUMENTARY | "Heavy Load" (9 p.m., IFC) can be enjoyed on many levels. It's a profile of a band made up of three learning-disabled talents from group homes and two of their social workers. In addition to raucous covers of the "Batman" theme and "Wipeout," they create odes to staying up all night and a curious celebration of singer George Michael.

Director Jerry Rothwell confesses that he was at a low moment in his life when he discovered Heavy Load and that it brought him so much joy that he couldn't help but document it, if only to spend more time in its presence.

But what begins as an upbeat — but never condescending — look at a group of disabled musicians becomes something more profound. The presence of the camera crew changes Heavy Load for both the better and the worse. At times, it's the "Let It Be" of disabled punk band documentaries, complete with acrimony, dissension and sudden departures.

"Heavy Load" ends on an upbeat note, with the band championing a movement for greater social mobility for the handicapped. It's also embraced by musicians as diverse as punk legend Wreckless Eric and pop diva Kyle Minogue.

"Heavy Load" is a touching movie for people who can't stand touching movies and a reminder that punk rock, at its purest and simplest, has always given a voice to sensitive souls on society's margins. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Researchers attempt to tackle malaria one mosquito at a time

In a cramped, humid laboratory in London, mosquitoes swarming in stacked, net-covered cages are being scrutinized for keys to controlling malaria.

Scientists have genetically modified hundreds of them, hoping to stop them from spreading the killer disease.

Faced with a losing battle against malaria, scientists are increasingly exploring new avenues that might have seemed far-fetched just a few years ago.

"We don't have things we can rely on," said Andrea Crisanti, the malaria expert in charge of genetically modifying mosquitoes at London's Imperial College. "It's time to try something else."

Malaria kills nearly 3 million people worldwide every year, mostly in sub-Saharan Africa. Millions of bed nets have been handed out, and villages across the continent have been doused with insecticide. But those measures haven't put a significant dent in malaria cases.

After a string of failed initiatives, the United Nations recently announced a campaign to provide bed nets to anyone who needs them by 2010.

Some scientists think creating mutant mosquitoes resistant to the disease might work better.

"We still have a malaria burden that is increasing," said Yeya Toure, a tropical disease expert at the World Health Organization.

"Under such circumstances, we have to investigate whether genetically modified mosquitoes could make a difference," said Toure, who is not involved in the Imperial College research.

Foundation has found the work so promising it has invested nearly $38 million in genetic strategies to stop mosquitoes from transmitting diseases like malaria and dengue fever.

"This is one of those high-tech, high-risk innovations that would fundamentally change the struggle between humans and mosquitoes," said Dr. Regina Rabinovich, director of infectious diseases development at the Gates Foundation.

Mosquitoes bred to be immune to malaria could break the disease's transmission cycle. "That is the nirvana of malaria control," said Rabinovich. "It would potentially transform what the field looks like."

In 2005, Crisanti proved it was possible to create a genetically modified mosquito by inserting a gene that glowed fluorescent green in males.

Among other possibilities, he and his team are now planning to create sterile male mosquitoes to mate with wild female mosquitoes, thus stunting population growth. They are also trying to engineer a malaria-resistant mosquito.

Last year, American researchers created mosquitoes resistant to a type of malaria that infects mice. Others are altering the DNA of the mosquitoes that spread dengue.

But not everyone thinks these super-mosquitoes are such a good idea. Some scientists think there are too many genetic puzzles to be solved for modified mosquitoes to work.

The malaria-causing parasite, which mosquitoes then transmit to humans, is simply too good at evading anything scientists might devise to protect the mosquito, argued to Jo Lines, a malaria expert at London's School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

"It's a series of arms races that the parasite has consistently won," Lines said. Whenever mosquitoes have developed genes resistant to the malaria-causing parasite, the parasite has always found a way around it, Lines said.

Quantity might also be a problem. "You are going to need to produce billions of these mosquitoes if this is ever going to work," Lines said.

Rabinovich said rigorous testing would be done before releasing any genetically modified mosquitoes into the wild.

"It's not nice to fool with Mother Nature," she said. "But if you can come up with another way of tackling [malaria], this is not something that one walks away from without fully evaluating it." MARIA CHENG (AP)

A More-Is-More Diet

Health

The 'Hungry Girl' helps others indulge in food without regret

When Lisa Lillien lost about 30 pounds seven years ago, she did it by giving up "everything good."

But she knew she couldn't maintain such a strict diet. So, instead, she worked to control her weight through smaller adjustments that were more likely to last.

By May 2004, Lillien's success had prompted her to send e-mail newsletters with diet tips and recipes to a handful of weight-watching friends.

Though she dreamed of turning her service into more, she let it develop naturally through word of mouth. It worked. By December, she was reaching about 10,000 subscribers.

"From day one, the reaction was so positive that I felt it was only a matter of time," she says.

Lisa Lillien, the "Hungry Girl," prepares low-calorie onion rings in Los Angeles.

Four years later, her "Hungry Girl" missives reach 450,000 subscribers daily.

Now that newsletter — and its

Web site spinoff Hungry-Girl.com ("Tips & Tricks For Hungry Chicks!") — have spawned a mini-industry, including product endorse-

“It’s just about finding guilt-free versions of the foods that you love ... and still fit[ting] into your pants.”

LISA LILLIEN, "HUNGRY GIRL"

ments and a new cookbook.

"I love to gossip. I love to share information. And food is something I feel really passionate about," says Lillien.

Nothing is off-limits for the Hungry Girl, from tuna melts to twice-baked potatoes, from brownies to banana bread. Lillien believes there's a smart way to indulge in just about anything.

Her way is neither extreme nor based on denial. She uses the Weight Watchers Points values as a guide, and some of her recipes are co-developed with Weight Watchers.

"It's just about finding guilt-free versions of the foods that you love and finding a way to incorporate things like pizza and onion rings and ice cream on a regular basis and still fit into your pants," Lillien says.

Since the start, Lillien has offered her seal of approval to numerous products she says are filling but pack few calories, including one of her favorites, Tofu Shirataki noodles.

Like all the foods Lillien suggests, the soy-based noodles provide filling portions with few calories.

"That's what the whole brand is based on ... finding the best products," Lillien says.

While companies like General Mills can't yet measure the impact of Hungry Girl mentions on sales of some of their products, such as Fiber One breakfast cereal, General Mills says it is happy to appear in her reviews and recipes.

"Hungry Girl is a natural fit for many of our brands," says Greg Zimprich, director of brand public relations.

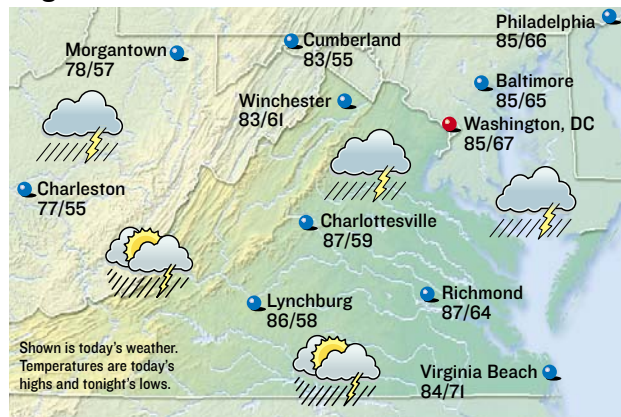

And now the tips and recipes that got her noticed online have gone old media in Lillien's cookbook, "Hungry Girl: Recipes and Survival Strategies for Guilt-Free Eating in the Real World."

Lillien says doesn't call herself an expert. "I'm not a nutritionist or a doctor," she writes in her book. "I'm just hungry." HILLARY RHODES (AP)

The other undeniable movement in the beauty industry is all things green, Jacobson says, although no one wants to compromise on effectiveness.

Women's Health magazine editor in chief Tina Johnson and beauty editor Liesa Goins say readers ask about the environment along with sensitive skin and acne. Goins notes that many of the products Women's Health highlighted — with help from a panel of experts that included salon owners, makeup artists and dermatologists — were inexpensive standbys.

Personal Effects

No face is the same, but some products suit nearly everyone

Beauty products are personal: What works for one oily skinned woman with brown eyes and thin hair might not work for her dry-skinned friend with blue eyes and thick, color-processed hair.

But some products have better batting averages than others.

The editorial staffs of many magazines, their readers and an industry group called Cosmetic Executive Women try to navigate through the slew of new beauty products with awards and best-of lists.

Many of CEW's winning products this year are multitasking, says the group's president, Carlotta Jacobson.

“Moisturizers have gone beyond being a moisturizer. You just can't be a moisturizer; it also has to correct skin tone or have total protection from the sun,” she says.

CEW is a fan of Frederic Fekkai Coiff Controle Ironless Straightening Balm.

A potential breakout product is Clinique's men's concealer.

many products you can find at the drugstore. We're conditioned to think you have to spend a lot of money to get effective products,” she says.

Count Johnson as one of those drugstore fans: She has been a longtime user of Cetaphil Gentle Skin Cleanser and also is a fan of Neutrogena Ultra Sheer Dry-Touch Sunblock SPF 45 and RoC Retinol Correction Deep Wrinkle Night Cream.

CEW's Jacobson, meanwhile, is interested in the “buzz” products: DiorShow Blackout Mascara and two-sided L'Oreal Infallible Lips. A potential breakout product with consumers is Clinique's men's concealer, she says.

“It's taking the first step that says men can have their own products — they have been using women's products,” she says. “Like everyone else, men can have blemishes and dark circles, plus they can have shaving nicks.”

Here are winners from CEW, Women's Health and Allure magazine:

COSMETIC EXECUTIVE WOMEN

BODY TREATMENT: Olay Thermal Pedicure in the mass market and Dr. Andrew Weil for Origins The Way of the Bath Matcha Tea Body Scrub in the prestige market.

In these uncertain financial times, perhaps you've considered investing your declining dollar in gold. With its new dual-purpose EYE COLOUR POT ($32, Sephora), Laura Mercier will do its damndest to convince you of the value of precious metal stock, at least when it comes to eye shadow. The tiny package whips out metallic shimmer on the double, with a crème shadow on top and sparkling loose powder beneath. We found the White Gold shade subtle enough for office wear; the Bronzed Gold produced a sultry after-hours look. Lids this rich just scream, “What recession?”

Actor, director and producer JOHN CUSACK was online Friday to discuss his career, his politics and his starring role in the movie "War, Inc.," which he produced and co-wrote.

While I don't necessarily disagree with your political views, I'm interested in understanding more about why high-profile personalities take strong public positions on political issues. Why should people listen to you — an artist — as opposed to various persons who are ostensibly legal and policy experts?

Given the fact that we can assume our intentions are from a sincere place, I wouldn't cede any more moral authority to any other citizen than I would to myself. I certainly wouldn't when it comes to the fact that many of the people that pontificate on television every day are not even journalists.

Do you think you will be helping Obama out more as the election comes nearer?

Yes, I will be working for Obama. What I hope to do with the film is encourage conversation about this very difficult and serious issue, and perhaps help motivate and inspire people to capture their spirit of defiance and outrage to take action.

Do you feel at this point in your career that you will only take roles in films that have a political/social message that you believe in? While I share your political views and appreciate your need to inform as well as entertain, I really enjoy your "Ice Harvest" and "Grosse Pointe Blank" type of roles.

No, I think I have been lucky to do a whole bunch of different things and hope to continue to. I think in these times with what's been happening with the Bush administration, I felt compelled to express myself.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You are in for something of an adventure before the day is out, particularly through associations with someone who shares your curiosity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your own perceptions may differ dramatically from the views others have to share with you at this time. Trust your instincts and serve the truth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Word to the wise: Practice what you preach. This is not the time to risk your reputation by showing yourself to be any kind of hypocrite.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) The unorthodox is likely to attract you — and satisfy you. Still, when you can, you will want to avoid any outright dangers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You must not be late, and you must not shirk your duties. Responsibility is essential at this time, as are image and self-respect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You should be able to correct a mistake and improve your chances during the coming cycle of increased activity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are not one to hold back the truth, but you may want to keep a secret or two until the time comes to reveal all you know.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Activities you indulge in secretly involve hidden risks that you may not recognize or appreciate until it's too late.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) What has taken you so long? Isn't it time you jumped on the bandwagon? If you have no clear-cut answers to these questions, it's time to regroup.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may want to be a little more demonstrative with your feelings, especially when you're trying to deliver an important personal message.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You must be willing to put in a little extra energy if a current project is to be the success you and your partners have planned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will find yourself playing the role of leader, even though you may not be in the position to call the shots in an official capacity.

Country Music History 101

THIS IS IN reply to Aric Maiden's response ("County Music Lacks Diversity," June 19). While I disagree with much of what Maiden wrote, I do agree that there haven't been any black or British country music megastars in quite a while. However, Cowboy Troy, a black country-rap artist, had a No. 2 country CD in 2005 and was a co-host of the fifth season of the "Nashville Star" TV show. Though not British, Keith Urban and Jamie O'Neal are two Australians who have had No. 1 country hits this millennium.
